Honor and Glory to our Fighting Heroes

There's nothing that quite so sharply brings the significance of war home to us here in the Valley . . . as seeing in print the name of someone long known to us, now serving in the armed forces; a hero manning one of the big anti-aircraft guns; a hero dropping bombs on an enemy ammunition plant; a hero on the deck of a battleship; a hero doing one of the many less colorful jobs for his country; a hero . . . whom you never gave much thought to, except as "the boy next door." Being aware of him in this new light does something to you. Sends a warm glow of pride to your face; and fills your heart with an emotion that you can translate into a desire to do more . . . for more . . . to help get this war over with, and bring that boy and all his contemporaries home, quick! There's a reason to put more zest into your war job and into your civilian volunteer work. There's a reason to put more pay into War Bonds, too . . . when you know that this Honor Roll of fighting heroes is a roll call of boys and girls, many of whom you've watched grow up . . . Whether they are known to you or not, together in service they are rich in honor and glory. And you'll want to know each one and every one . . . when they come marching home!

FOREWORD

AMERICA IS AT WAR! The men and women of this country have answered the call to arms in great numbers in order that the principles of Democracy may be upheld and the rulership of ruthless dictatorial powers again may be restored to normalcy for the best interests of humanity the world over. The conflict goes on, and our sons and daughters, brothers and sisters, fathers and even our mothers, are still joining the colors, to make the universe a better place in which to live.

Now, two years after Pearl Harbor, perhaps we are justified in pausing momentarily from our war effort to salute these men and women who have donned the uniforms of the various branches of the services — the Army and the Navy, the Marines and the Air Corps, the Merchant Marines, the Red Cross, the WACs, SPARs and the WAVEs, among top-ranking organizations—those who have forsaken civilian occupations and pursuits of personal happiness, while we carry on along the vast “home front” of these United States.

It is therefore with considerable pride and patriotic fervor that the following compilation of the likenesses and biographical sketches of more than one thousand individuals has been brought into publication for the first time between a set of covers while the World War II continues. The publisher and editors have given the most conscientious attention to the preparation of this Album, yet realize its incompleteness because many are being inducted into the Armed Forces even as this book goes to press and many will be enlisting as the conflict goes on. It has been difficult to obtain detailed data on the early background of numerous persons because of their absence now from the community. Their service records, too, are yet in the making and will not be complete until the war is won and their names are written among the nation's valiant heroes and heroines, some of whom may never again rejoin their families and loved ones here at home. Thus, the complete and final account of the patriotic contributions of this community's service men and women is left to another day. It is hoped that any inaccuracies and omissions in this book may be corrected in a later volume when America emerges victorious over her enemies in the European and Asiatic theaters of war.

BRATTON MEETS NEW SON

Brief informal introductions were in order here yesterday, when F. Arnold Bratton, pharmacists mate 1st class, U.S.N. hit the beach to meet his son, Stephen Arnold, now six weeks old.

It was an instance of mutual admiration at first meeting. Bratton is stationed aboard the new U.S.S. hospital ship Repose, already carving a course to Japan to bring back wounded and dying American prisoners. He was at Pearl Harbor on similar duty, returning shattered victims of the Jap attack for hospitalization here.

Bratton joined his wife, the former Antoinette Vitalith, at the home of his mother, Mrs. W. W. Rector, at 11572 Weddington st., North Hollywood.

He hopes to renew acquaintance with Stephen on his return, when they can have more time together.

A Tribute to Our Valley Heroes

To the hundreds of Valley men and women in the armed forces, we make this pledge . . . that we will do all in our power to back them up to the utmost! While we can never repay them for their sacrifice . . . we can . . . and WE WILL . . . WORK, SAVE and BUY WAR BONDS. With this sacred promise, we salute them all . . . all the Valley boys and girls who are serving their country in its hour of need. In so doing, we also pay tribute to EVERY American EVERYWHERE who is fighting to maintain the FOUR FREEDOMS . . . to preserve America's Independence, now and forever.
